MEMORANDUM FOR:

SUBJECT   :   Minority Recruiting

Minority student interest in Agency employment was overwhelming at Boston College's AHANA (Afro-American, Hispanic, Asian and Native American) Career Expo last night. Of the 53 companies/organizations represented, our table was by far the busiest for the entire two and a half hour Expo. At least 20 students asked for additional information on the Agency overall as well as more specific information on careers in their area of specialization; appropriate brochures are in the mail to them today.

The Boston College students were particularly impressed with the diversity of Agency jobs. In addition, the Student Programs - Minority Undergraduate Studies Program, Career Intern Program, and Grad Studies Program - were a big hit. I used the Expo principally as a forum to push these programs to the sophomores, juniors and seniors (depending on the program) to give them an opportunity to learn about the programs/qualifications well before, in many cases, they are eligible to apply. I find that it is often too late to recruit for these programs in the fall; most students are not focusing on job opportunities 2-3 weeks after their summer break.
